ABSOLUT + Sascha Gattermann Not all your shots will be perfect. In fact, most of them probably won't. But that's just what makes it so damn good: when stuff is a mess, when it's blurry, when it's out of focus, when it's for the first time; that's when your best work is going to be created. I've been thinking recently about the work that we do in life, and how most of us are pretty careful about our long term and short term goals. What I've learnt is that the best stuff we've done in life has never been done on autopilot – we spent some time planning, strategising and considering the options. Most of us shy away from hard decision making, preferring instead to have lofty goals and just let life happen to us. But that approach is flawed. Your life is hard and your goals are important. You can't just let it happen to you. This is what I learnt recently at the ABSOLUT + Sascha Gattermann dialogue workshop. It's not about learning to shoot better. It's about learning to make the most of your shots. There is a fine line between useful and useless work. This line is what I'm trying to find. In life we are often meant to succeed in multiple ways: the right person, the right route, the right time. We're mentored and planned for. A good mentor comes at your point of need, and helps you move forward. The photo workshop was about helping me to find my most valuable shots. It's a way to get to the soul of a good image, where the light hits the paper in just the right way. I'm developing a network of photographers, so that when I find good stuff I can sell my pictures quickly to the right person. I'm working with photographers who have world-class skills, to help them to get their shots on top of a global marketplace. From my workshops you can be part of that too. Every year, for about a month, 20 aspiring photographers get together and learn about how to improve their images from photographers with 10+ years of experience. Each workshop lasts three months, with

What's New In?

As a result of the Victorian government releasing a list of people who have had convictions for a sexual offence, Daniel Smith and his friend have been accused of raping a girl with mental health issues. The shock images of the duo are making headlines around the world. This story was previously featured as a Wombat. When Lisa Smith saw a Facebook post by Daniel Smith that her son had been labelled a paedophile, she was moved to tears. Lisa and her husband Aaron Smith had given birth to baby Lachlan six months earlier, but still they had not told their son their family history. Lisa Smith remembered how Daniel Smith, who would soon become her son's stepfather, once told her that, growing up, his father had molested him. She had never questioned the family's paternity. Soon after Daniel became her step-son, Lisa Smith noticed that her son was repeatedly looking at images of another man. "Daniel spent a lot of his time looking at his phone and I would ask him, 'what you looking at, sweetheart?'" said Lisa. "He didn't like it when I asked him, so I started allowing him to have his privacy. I would open his text messages and go through them. "But after a few weeks he started telling me, 'Mum, I have to stop looking at this stuff'. I didn't think much of it, as I thought Daniel needed to grow up and I would treat him like a normal teenager. "At 20 months, he told me he liked another man and I didn't think much of it again. He started to say it again at 17 months. "His teacher said to me, 'Daniel is insisting that he is in a relationship with another man'. "I started to get confused. The child was in high risk of abuse. "It was quite a shock for me to hear the teacher say that Daniel was looking at gay material. I didn't know what to do. Daniel was looking at images of other men and I thought, 'what if this happens to Daniel?'" Lisa's son had been diagnosed with Asperger's syndrome and severe anxiety. The Smiths sought help from the Children's Safe and Sound and
